HybriDoor. Finalist in the annual Innovation Awards sponsored by the Economic Development Corporation (EDC).

SARASOTA, FL – COMMERCIAL REFRIGERATOR DOOR COMPANY is proud to announce that our new HybriDoor line of frame & door assemblies has earned the distinction of being a Finalist in the annual Innovation Awards sponsored by the Economic Development Corporation (EDC).

The EDC's Innovation Award is a competitive category in that it is not limited strictly to refrigeration and supermarket related equipment. It is an annual award and an open category for any product or service that claims an innovation in energy efficiency and/or sustainability. Being selected as a Finalist is an honor and an accomplishment in and of itself. As noted by Rob Winsler, President of COMMERCIAL, "Entering this category was the easy step, but being selected as a finalist, after a rigorous application and interview process, is a validation that the importance and benefit of our new HybriDoor line is obvious, even to the general non-refrigeration public."

The Energy Independence and Security Act became effective January 1, 2009. This new Federal law issued strict mandates for energy efficiency and performance in many areas of refrigeration, walk-in panel construction, and glass display door construction. COMMERCIAL was able to exceed the specifications of the mandate, well ahead of the deadline, with the introduction of the HybriDoor model at a grand introduction to the market at the NACS show in Chicago in late 2008. The product has been available and shipping since January 1st, meaning all of COMMERCIAL's valued dealer-partners and end-users were in compliance with the new Federal law from day one. COMMERCIAL, a proud Energy Star partner, proves time and again just how seriously we take our commitment to energy efficiency and sustainability.

The HybriDoor line is available for cooler and freezer applications, and for standard or high humidity environments, in a multitude of sizes, finishes, and configurations.
